

Central to fulfilling the educational, research, and scholarly mission of Clark University is a campus environment that fosters the free pursuit of inquiry and the free exchange of ideas. To ensure as fully as possible an impartial forum for discourse and debate and that all members of the Clark community feel their views and voices are welcome, Clark University, through its representative leaders, shall as the default practice decline to make official statements on behalf of the institution or any unit (school, department, institute, center, program, or the like) within the institution – especially with regard to social and political issues whether
