

TUFTS UNIVERSITY
OUTCOME OF THE COMMITTEE ON STUDENT LIFE'S
HEARING OF COMPLAINTS BROUGHT BY DAVID DENNIS
AND THE MUSLIM STUDENT ASSOCIATION
AGAINST THE PRIMARY SOURCE
APRIL 30, 2007
Sophia Gordon Hall, 6:30pm-midnight

Background

On Monday, April 30, 2007, the Committee on Student Life met to hear two complaints against The Primary Source. The first, filed by David A. Dennis, charged The Primary Source with harassment and creating a hostile environment on campus through the publication of "O Come All Ye Black Folk," a carol featured in its December 6, 2006 edition. The second, filed by the Muslim Student Association ("MSA"), represented by Shirwac Mohamed and Nayema Khan, charged The Primary Source with harassment and creating a hostile environment on campus through the publication of "Islam-Arabic Translation: Submission," a commentary published in its April 11, 2007 edition that imitated the format of the MSA's advertisement for events during Islamic Awareness Week. The hearing joined the two complaints by agreement of all the parties.

The panel, which consisted of seven voting and three non-voting ex officio members, listened attentively to the five and a half hours of testimony and argument from the parties: complainant David A. Dennis and his four witnesses; complainant Shirwac Mohamed and his three witnesses; respondents Douglas Kingman and Jordan Greene, representing The Primary Source, their one witness, and their advocate. The CSL also heard the testimony of Matthew Gardner-Schuster, the current Editor-in-Chief of The Primary Source.

Decision

This is a complicated case that, at its core, requires us to resolve a conflict between two important policies at Tufts University: freedom of expression on the one hand, and non-discrimination on the other.

The Committee recognizes that freedom of expression is one of the founding principles of this great nation, one of the precepts that distinguish us as a democracy, a core value of academic endeavor, and a philosophical tenet that benefits our campus community.

find that Mr. Dennis proved, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the carol created a hostile environment on campus for himself and other black students. The Committee found that Mr. Dennis and his witnesses established that the carol in question targeted them on the basis of their race, subjected them to ridicule and embarrassment, intimidated them, and had a deleterious impact on their growth and well-being on campus.

In the case of the Muslim Student Association (“MSA”) v. The Primary Source, by a vote of 7 to 0, we find that the MSA proved, by a preponderance of the evidence, that The Primary Source harassed Muslim students at Tufts, and created a hostile environment for them by publishing “Islam-Arabic Translation: Submission.” The Committee found that the MSA established that the commentary at issue targeted members of the Tufts Muslim community for harassment and embarrassment, and that Muslim students felt psychologically intimidated by the piece.

These decisions are grounded in our conclusion that although Tufts students should feel free to engage in speech that others might find offensive and even hurtful, Tufts University’s non-discrimination policy embodies important community standards of behavior that Tufts, as a private institution, has an obligation to uphold. Our campus should be a place where students feel safe, respected, and valued. Freedom of speech should not be an unfettered license to violate the rights of other members of the community, without recourse.

We find that the above-mentioned carol and commentary, rather than promoting political or social discourse, as claimed by the members of The Primary Source, instead were designed to harass and intimidate members of the Tufts community because of their race (black) and religion (Islam).

Consequence and Recommendation

In issuing the following, the Committee has attempted to strike a balance between protecting the rights of students to exist on campus without being subjected to unreasonable attacks based on their race or religion and protecting the rights of students to publish controversial writings.

Consequence

From now on, all material published in The Primary Source (whether characterized as satirical or otherwise) must be attributed to named author(s) or contributor(s).

Recommendation

We ask that student governance consider the behavior of student groups in future decisions concerning recognition and funding.
